Comparative Market Analysis

694 W Jedediah Way S, Grantsville, UT 84029 (Northstar Ranch)

MLS #2144934 | Currently Active — 130+ DOM | Prepared August 13, 2026

DATA-SUPPORTED VALUE RANGE

$480,000 – $525,000

Best estimate: $505,000 (~$168/sqft)

Current list of $539,900 (with $10,000 concessions, net ≈$529,900) sits above where local data actually supports — the closest-matching sold comps (same size/age/style) closed at $484K–$485K, and the most recent 90 days of Grantsville sold data trend meaningfully below the full 2.5-year average.

RECENT SOLD TREND — IS THE MARKET MOVING?

WINDOW	COMPS	AVG	MEDIAN
Last 90 days	34	$513,291	$470,355
Last 180 days	81	$529,998	$485,000
Full comp pool (2.5 yrs)	238	$530,988	$520,000

- Unlike a flat market, this shows real softening — median sold price has trended down from $520,000 (full pool) toward $470,355 (last 90 days).
- The CMA regression model's own fitted trend confirms the direction: -1.5%/year, controlling for size/age/features — a more apples-to-apples read than the raw comp averages, which also mix in some older/smaller homes among the recent sales.
- Either way, both signals point the same direction: caution against anchoring to the higher end of the full 2.5-year average.

MLS SUBJECT RANGE — GRANTSVILLE SITE-BUILT SFH

- Active avg $648,156 (median $611,995, n=60) — current competition, unproven asking prices, subject excluded from this count.
- Under Contract avg $588,060 (median $608,950, n=10) — where deals are actually agreeing to close right now, well below active asking.
- Sold avg $530,988 (median $520,000, n=238) — the proven anchor, though the Recent Sold Trend above shows this average is already higher than the most current data supports.
- Backup data too thin to report (n=1) — not used.

> Notable: the two closest matches by size/age (#1 and #4, both ~2,930-3,076 sqft, built 2023, minimal basement finish — nearly identical to subject) sold at $484,000 and $485,000. The higher comps (#2, #3, #5-8) mostly have significantly more finished basement or larger garage capacity than the subject's ~30% finish / 2-car garage.

> Fallback note: Grantsville doesn't yet have enough of its own resale sales for a standalone model, so this fit uses the full Tooele County pool. The pipeline flags this automatically and will narrow to Grantsville-only data as more local sales accumulate.

> This regression estimate ($498,943–$516,234) sits close to the Conservative–Best Estimate range above, reinforcing that current list price likely has room to come down further, even accounting for the property's 2023 build quality and larger-than-typical 0.37-acre lot.

THE PRICING CONVERSATION

IF YOU REPRESENT THE BUYER

- Lead with what's genuinely good about the home — 2023 build, 0.37-acre lot (well above the 0.20–0.25 ac subdivision norm), quality finishes, RV parking. This isn't a weak property; it's a mispriced one.
- Then bring the data, not an opinion: "Two homes nearly identical to this one — same size, same age, similar basement finish — sold for $484,000 and $485,000. That's real, recent, and close to your specs."
- Name the leverage plainly: 130+ days on market with two price drops already tells you the seller has tested higher prices and the market hasn't supported them.
- Use the trend as backup, not the headline: the last 90 days of Grantsville sales are running below the 2.5-year average — waiting isn't likely to make this home more expensive.
- Suggested opening: $480,000–$490,000, with room to move to $505,000 if needed to win it — still well inside the data-supported range, and below the seller's net-of-concession ask of $529,900.

IF YOU REPRESENT THE SELLER

- Open with the data, not a verdict: "I want to walk you through what's actually happening in the market right now, so we can make a confident call together — not just my opinion."
- Show the gap honestly: at $539,900, the price sits above where the closest comparable sales have closed — two homes nearly identical to yours sold at $484,000 and $485,000.
- Explain it's not personal: the broader Grantsville market has softened over the last 90 days compared to the full 2.5-year average — this is a market shift, not a reflection of the home.
- Offer a constructive path, not just a cut: the ~1,049 sqft of unfinished basement represents roughly $96,500 of value at this market's own rates ($92–$133/sqft) — finishing more of it before the next round of showings is a real option alongside a price move.
- Recommendation: given 130+ days already invested, a move to $505,000–$515,000 would align the listing with where buyers are actually transacting, rather than continuing to test a price point the last two reductions already showed wasn't working.

> *Both scripts lead with the data before the number — the goal is a client who understands why, not just what to do next.*

LISTING FLAGS

130+ days on market with two price drops. Puts real pressure on the seller — buyer offers below list, or requests for additional concessions beyond the existing $10,000, are reasonably likely to be considered.

Unfinished basement is the main value gap. ~1,049 sqft unfinished at this pricing model's rate (~$92/sqft) represents roughly $96,500 of embedded, unrealized value — a real negotiating point for a buyer, or a pre-list finishing decision for a seller.

Confirm walkout/daylight basement status. Not specified in available records. Adds a $17,291 flat premium to the regression estimate if confirmed — worth checking before finalizing a number either direction.

Two closest-matching comps sold well below current list. Both nearly identical in size/age/finish level to the subject — $484,000 and $485,000 — a strong, specific data point for offer or price-reduction conversations.
